REMARKS.

The existence of Claflin University is due largely to the generosity of the Hon. Lee Claflin and family, of Boston, Mass. The College Campus is the original site of the Orangeburg Female Seminary. In July, 1869, the property was secured by Rev. A. Webster, D. D., and T. Willard Lewis, and was set apart to its present purpose. In December following a liberal charter was obtained from the State of South Carolina. By Act of Legislature, approved March 12th, 1872, the State College of Agriculture and Mechanics' Institute was located at Orangeburg, in connection with the University. An Experimental Farm, consisting of one hundred and sixteen acres was provided.

In January, 1876, the buildings, Library, &c., were consumed by fire. A large and commodious brick building was soon erected, and others of less value have been added.

The Campus contains thirty-seven acres. It possesses great natural beauty and attractiveness. The location is healthful; it is well supplied with good water, and is remarkably free from malaria and epidemics. No death has occurred on the Campus among the Students since the organization of the School.

COURSES OF STUDY.

LIBRARY AND READING ROOM.

The Library contains fourteen hundred volumes, besides a large number of classified pamphlets and periodicals. The Departments represented are Science, Art and Theology. Valuable donations have been made by friends, and still other donations are greatly needed.

The Reading Forms are supplied with religious periodicals and a good assortment of daily and weekly secular newspapers.

LITERARY SOCIETIES.

The Alpha Alpha Society was organized in 1876, and is intended for Students in the Normal Course.

The Belles Lettres Society was organized October 17th, 1879, and is intended for students in the College Course.

The object of these Societies is literary culture and mental discipline. The exercises consist of essays, recitations, readings, debates, criticisms, and other literary recreations.

Devotional Services are held in the College Chapel every morning, and all the Students are required to be present.

Duke Theological Institute.

It was organized in Charleston, was transferred to Orangeburg, and became a Department of the University. This School of Theology is open to young men of all denominations who are preparing for the Ministry.

INDUSTRIES.

School of Carpentry.—A good and substantial Carpenter Shop has been built and furnished with several sets of tools. We hope soon to supply an engine and machinery for the manufacture of plain furniture. This Department is under the care of a competent Superintendent. A limited number of Students from the upper classes are enrolled for work. These not only learn a good trade, but earn nearly enough money to meet their expenses.

Work on the Farm.—Students in the various Courses may work on the farm, and thus meet a portion of their expenses.

Girls' Industrial Home.—The Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church have established a Girls' Industrial Home in connection with the University. It provides, in a neat, well furnished Cottage, accommodations for eighteen girls, and all necessary appliances for self-board-ing. In addition to regular school duties daily instruction is given in cooking, cutting, sewing and general domestic economy, by an efficient Matron.

BOARDING HALL

The Boarding Hall has been thoroughly reorganized and equipped, and is conducted in a simple home-like manner.

The Students are divided into sections and wait on the tables and do all of the Dining Room work.

Suitable accommodations have been provided on the University grounds for self-boarded students.
